A dedicated optometrist with extensive experience in clinical care, research, dispensing, and primary eye health training, he brings a strong commitment to advancing eye care through evidence-based practice and academic engagement. His expertise lies in diagnostic optometry, learner-centred teaching, and translating research into meaningful clinical outcomes. He has a keen interest in community eye health and the capacity building of allied healthcare personnel. He values interdisciplinary collaboration, ethical practice, and continuous professional development. With a passion for service, innovation, and mentoring, he seeks an academic-clinical role where he can contribute to impactful teaching, quality patient care, and the strengthening of eye health systems at both local and global levels.
